Excerpt: .It will not avail them, if Corn Bills they have: Reform and retrenchment! there s nought else can save. ON THE REFORM BILL BEING BROUGHT IN. Now the state tinkers are at work, I would them all advise, sir, To make the kettle stout and strong, And of an ample size, sir! So large, that all may have a share, And not a favour d few, sir; That Hunt himself may be constrain d To say, The thing will do, sir. The kettle of the Church and State, Through time and much abusing, Except the tories, all declare, Is hardly fit for using. But now, at last, it is agreed For to enlarge and mend it; And all the aristocracy Are very much offended. When Johnny Bull the kettle made, His family was small, sir! T was at the time quite large enough To satisfy them all, sir! But Johnny s family, of late, Has got a great increase, sir; If not enlarg d, t is very clear, They cannot live in peace, sir. CORPORATION REFORM. Rejoice, honest Englishmen, all; At last, we ve got corporate reform: Corruption has had its downfall, Without revolution or storm. Without our free-will and consent, No more of our money they ll spend; So, radicals, all be content, Their plundering s all at an end. Rotten boroughs have long been the door Through which vile corruption crept in To that House we will now make so pure, That...
